—BETSY DeVOS, SECRETARY OF EDUCATION

"School choice also means that parents can homeschool their children. Hundred percent."
—DONALD TRUMP, PRESIDENT

HUSTLER SATIRE: This is not a real ad. It is a commentary on the rampant opportunity for abuse and complete lack of regulation in homeschooling, an education model our current administration embraces wholeheartedly. A recent Los Angeles Times article noted that "Abuse in homeschool settings is all too common" and cited a 2014 study of child torture finding "that 47% of school-age victims had been withdrawn from school for homeschooling and an additional 29% had never been enrolled." In many states homeschooling requires no paperwork whatsoever, no oversight and no assessment of academic progress. HEALTHCARE "CONSCIENCE" OFFICE IS UNCONSCIONABLE

With multiple reports of harassment against women and an alleged affair with porn star Stormy Daniels, while married to Melania, Donald Trump is hardly a religious man. But that doesn't stop him from pandering to his loyal holy-roller base.

The latest gift is the newly formed Conscience and Religious Freedom Division in the Department of Health and Human Services. This new office is tasked with protecting medical professionals who object to treatments they find morally offensive. Federal statutes that legalize this discrimination already exist, but the new HHS cops would give them teeth. How could this affect you or your neighbors?

Critics cite all kinds of bizarre, harmful scenarios: Doctors, nurses and pharmacists obedient to their mysterious Sky God could refuse to provide any kind of birth control services, including prescriptions, abortion and sterilization. Law professor Elizabeth Sepper says, "You could have translators who refuse to translate for a woman undergoing tubal ligation." Note that abortion is not always an elective procedure—about 700 women die every year from complications in pregnancy and childbirth. Sometimes abortion is necessary to save their lives, and healthcare professionals could now refuse to do so and be protected by this administration.

LGBTQ people could also suffer. Many of them confess that they have already encountered discrimination from hostile healthcare providers, who would now be further enabled by the new enforcement office. The Washington Post reported that Roger Severino, director of the HHS Office for Civil Rights "did not rule out" that LGBTQ-related cases could arise, and a department spokesperson told Wired magazine they would not interpret prohibitions on sex discrimination in healthcare to cover gender identity. Religious nuts who believe gay people with HIV deserve the Lord's punishment would be free to refuse necessary treatment. Assisted suicide, now legal in six states, could also be in jeopardy—sorry, God demands that you suffer excruciating pain until He decides to take you!

Our Constitution does guarantee religious freedom, and this must be respected, as long as those beliefs do not hamper other citizens' rights or harm society as a whole. No Christian, Jew or Muslim woman is obligated to get an abortion, and no doctor who objects is obligated to perform one—they can go into another field.

This issue goes far beyond the trivial example of holy rollers refusing to bake a cake for a gay wedding, or issue a gay marriage wedding license—these are life-or-death issues. The first principle of doctors and nurses is to "do no harm." If their religious beliefs trump that rule, then they should abandon the medical profession.

Folks wearing "Make America Great Again" caps are mostly fools whose lack of tolerance for diverse people is matched only by their lack of tolerance for inconvenient facts. We need to grow up and leave antiquated religious beliefs in the distant past, where they belong, with the catapult, water wheel and chariot.

PRIVACY IS DEAD

THE INTERNET HAS MADE LIFE EASIER FOR SHOPPERS, FRIEND SEEKERS AND GOVERNMENT SNOOPS.

Love him or hate him, only a fool could deny the weighty presence of Donald Trump and his capacity to turn our world upside down. Surprisingly, predictions that he would explode like an overinflated hot-air balloon, or be cut to his proper measure by seasoned politicians and an enlightened media, or be intimidated by the enormity of his ignorance in dealing with the complex problems confronting our country have all proven false.

Instead, Trump has proved to be incredibly effective in institutionalizing his whims, perversions and other eccentricities as government policies while the established order is in disarray. At every turn since taking office, he has systematically mocked the checks and balances intended to ensure rational governance—the Constitution, Congress and a free press. How did this happen?

Allow me to offer a possibly plausible explanation for this unfortunate confluence of circumstances. Throughout most of its existence, our nation was driven by market forces that required commonly agreed upon rules of the road to drive the economy and maintain enough of a social safety net to prevent riots. These included ever-improving standards vis-à-vis civil behavior, education and the legal profession, as well as rational health, immigration and workplace practices.

America had a power elite that tolerated only adult behavior on the part of those it hired—elected—to run the government store. But by the time of the historic rise of the Trumper to the Presidency, that ruling elite's economic underpinnings had crumbled.

The Industrial Revolution ended and with it the dominance of huge extractive companies, such as Standard Oil, and manufacturing behemoths led by General Motors and General Electric. Even Big Pharma and the construction trades are on the ropes, and of course the tobacco industry is a sick joke. The financial industry is larger than ever, but its excessive greed in creating the housing recession has robbed it of any authority.

It is time to recognize that the jobs, culture, lifestyle, prestige and manipulative might of those legacy sectors of the economy are exhausted. That includes the traditional means of communication, the grand old duo of newspapers and broadcasting, which once confidently made sense of everything, but are now clearly co-opted, confused and battered.

Delivering the knockout punch is the giant of our brave new world, the internet. What else could have created a burgeoning consumerist anarchy whose defining moment was the election of political upstart Donald Trump? Yes, the wrecking ball of his Presidency would not have been possible were it not for the ascendancy of prescient high-tech internet corporations, which turned the maniacal indulgence of online shopping into an overwhelmingly dominant economic and cultural catalyst.

Summarizing the market news after the first year of Trump, a Wall Street Journal headline said it best: "Tech Giants Power to New Heights." For the first time, Apple, Alphabet (Google), Amazon, Microsoft and Facebook were the top five richest companies in the country. Reporting record profits, they "extended their dominance over swaths of the global economy."

The New York Times' tech columnist Farhad Manjoo noted, "In 2017 large American tech companies have kept hauling in more money and more users, and—to a degree that might seem dystopian—they continued to expand their foothold in our lives. This was a year in which Amazon created a way for its delivery drivers to let themselves into your house, and Apple created a phone you can unlock with your face."

Nevertheless, Google and Facebook took some hits in 2017, most notably criticism for dispensing fake news. Some Democrats have made still unsubstantiated claims that this swung the 2016 Presidential election. But fake news is nothing new, and one only need recall iconic newspaper publisher William Randolph Hearst, who boasted that he could easily parlay some photos into a cause for war. The old economy has plenty of opportunities for media manipulation by political demagogues, government propagandists and powerful special interests.

Here's what makes the internet economy truly dystopian: Lies are now weaponized through targeted marketing on platforms created by Google and Facebook, whose business models require knowing everything about our vulnerabilities when we're online. They are the keepers of the vast clouds of data that George Orwell warned about in his novel 1984, which predicted the domination of a snooping, totalitarian Big Brother.

Today we live in that world where individual privacy is dead, and we are seduced to expose our most intimate thoughts, not to mention precise location, a would-be dictator's wet dream. Nowadays it is information you turn over to the powerful, not through physical or mental coercion during an interrogation, but eagerly in pursuit of an enhanced shopping experience.

It's a dangerously costly game disguised as fun, just like a drunken night in one of Trump's casinos. Only now his casino is the world. H

THE U.S. IS GOING TO POT

…AND THERE'S NOTHING DONALD TRUMP OR JEFF SESSIONS CAN DO ABOUT IT.

A recent national poll funded by Smart Approaches to Marijuana, a leading antilegalization group, found that just 16% of the respondents wanted current federal marijuana laws to remain unchanged. On the other hand, 83% of Americans polled agreed that cannabis should be legalized or decriminalized in some fashion (1% undecided).

Someone should point out this startling consensus to the nation's top law-enforcement official, Attorney General Jeff Sessions. He heads the U.S. Justice Department, which announced it would rescind Obama-era guidelines that had allowed legal marijuana to thrive across the country.

Voters in dozens of states have chosen to legalize medical marijuana, while nine states and the District of Columbia have approved pot for recreational use. Nevertheless our attorney general wants to turn back time and the "states' rights" that Republicans like him pretend to champion—at least when those rights pertain to something they pretend to give a damn about.

In a January 2018 memorandum on marijuana enforcement, Sessions declared, "It is the mission of the Department of Justice to enforce the laws of the United States, and the previous issuance of guidance undermines the rule of law and the ability of our local, state, tribal, and federal law enforcement partners to carry out this mission." He then directed "all U.S. Attorneys to use previously established prosecutorial principles that provide them all the necessary tools to disrupt criminal organizations, tackle the growing drug crisis, and thwart violent crime across our country."

The pushback came quickly, even from Republicans. GOP Senator Cory Gardner of Colorado, where legalized recreational weed has been an enormous boon to the state's revenue stream, blasted the Trump Administration's revised marijuana policy. He fumed that it "contradicts what Attorney General Sessions told me prior to his confirmation."

Senator Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska) complained that she had "repeatedly discouraged Attorney General Sessions from taking this action," calling the move "disruptive to state regulatory regimes."

Kentucky's Republican, libertarian-leaning senator, Rand Paul, also challenged what he said was "a states' rights issue," as did Representative Mike Coffman (R-Colorado). Besides insinuating that the Justice Department's planned crackdown violated the U.S. Constitution's commerce clause, Coffman insisted that his state "had every right to legalize marijuana" and vowed to do "everything I can to protect that right against the power of an overreaching federal government."

Sessions has specified that new guidance is needed to fight criminal gangs and violent crime in states where marijuana is now legally sold, but Mike Liszewski scoffed at that claim. The longtime pot-legalization advocate told me, "If someone was using a state marijuana law to shield some sort of bad activity, they're clearly going to be in violation of state law. There's so much oversight, you're likely going to get caught rather quickly. So there's really no need for additional federal prosecution…. It's really addressing a concern that doesn't actually exist—unless you have some sort of hysterical views about marijuana."

As it turns out, Donald Trump's 71-year-old attorney general does have such views. In 2017 Sessions described marijuana as "only slightly less awful" than heroin. Although Trump's personal thoughts on pot are far from clear, during his Presidential campaign he repeatedly conceded that cannabis legalization was best left up to the states.

As Liszewski also told me, there's little evidence that legalization has increased crime. Instead it has "turned out to be wonderful for generating state tax revenue…both in terms of the money it's pulling in, but also the law-enforcement resources, the jail resources, the court resources, that don't have to go into prosecuting low-level marijuana cases."

A group opposed to legalizing marijuana has found that most Americans want to end decades of federal prohibition. States are saving or raising hundreds of millions of dollars by regulating and taxing marijuana cultivation and commerce. Even GOP lawmakers, long thought to be opponents of weed, are fighting to protect their states' right to sell it.

So what's the holdup? Why doesn't Congress simply end America's enduring nightmare—a costly, futile and racially discriminatory Drug War—once and for all by legalizing marijuana nationwide or at least decriminalizing the substance and leaving it up to individual states on how to proceed?

Liszewski predicted a positive outcome now that dozens of pro-pot bills are wafting around in both the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate. "It would be very, very difficult to get the genie back in the bottle at this point," he told me. "Sessions is alone on an island with this and has very few supporters. I think the writing is on the wall."

Liszewski added, "You probably have close to a 50-50 split in the Republican Party in Congress, as to whether or not they'd be willing to vote for states' rights on marijuana…. The divide on that being your younger Republicans and your more libertarian Republicans are the ones who would be supportive of us. But the older, more establishment Republicans take that more traditional, tough-on-crime approach. They're the ones who control the committees; they're the ones who control what legislation goes through."

Finally Liszewski emphasized, "That's why the 2018 elections are going to be so crucial to the future of marijuana reform. Because whether it's a shift in which party controls each chamber, or if it's just voting out the old guard and getting some new Republicans in, either way would be helpful towards ending federal marijuana prohibition."

Whaddaya know? It all comes down to voting, yet again. So what are you planning to do on November 6? I've got a great idea how you can celebrate the results afterward. H

MARK ZUCKERBERG

In the film The Social Network about the founding of Facebook, Mark Zuckerberg's soon-to-be-ex-girlfriend tells him, "You're going to go through life thinking that girls don't like you because you're a nerd. And I want you to know, from the bottom of my heart, that that won't be true. It'll be because you're an asshole."

She hit the nail on the head. Of course Zuckerberg is not alone; in Silicon Valley, assholery is almost a requirement for being a tech entrepreneur. But Zuckerberg epitomizes the type: a harmless-looking geek with the heart of a blood-drenched conquistador. As portrayed in the movie, Zuckerberg's Harvard classmates, the Winklevoss twins, claim that he didn't even come up with the idea for Facebook; rather, the supposed genius stole it from them.

The twins had hired Zuckerberg to program their own social/dating networking site. In AOL instant messages from that period, he discussed his scheme with a friend: "So you know how I'm making that dating site. I wonder how similar that is to the Facebook thing. Because they're probably going to be released around the same time. Unless I fuck the dating site people over and quit on them right before I told them I'd have it done." Later, that's exactly what he decided to do: "Yeah, I'm going to fuck them. Probably in the ear."

Shortly after launching TheFacebook.com site at Harvard, he was astounded to have sucked up "over 4,000 emails, pictures, addresses" submitted. Asked how he managed that hoovering of private information, Zuck replied, "I don't know why. They 'trust me.' Dumb fucks." After the Winklevoss twins complained to the university and Harvard was considering booting him for unethical behavior, he told his friend, "You can be unethical and still be legal. That's the way I live my life. Haha."

There you have it, straight from the horse's mouth. But fucking over his classmates wasn't enough—he had to rub their noses in it. After the Winklevoss brothers launched their own network, ConnectU, Zuckerberg hacked into it and created a fake profile for Cameron Winklevoss, rejoicing that "We copied his account like his profile and everything except I made his answers all like white supremacist." The fake profile included these lines: "Hometown: I'm fucking privileged...where do you think I'm from. Hair color: Aryan blond. Favorite music: The sound of myself masturbating. Favorite quote: 'Homeless people are worth their weight in paper clips—I hate black people.' Interests: Trying to find my penis. Squandering my father's money. Looking like a douchebag." If that wasn't enough, Zuck the real douchebag sabotaged the ConnectU site by deactivating user accounts.

That was Wonder Boy Zuckerberg's first foray into "fake news," but it wouldn't be his last. Or the last time he bungholed his partners. His Harvard buddy, Eduardo Saverin, got TheFacebook.com off the ground by putting up $15,000 to pay for the fledgling network's servers, and then formed an LLC with Zuckerberg and cofounder Dustin Moskovitz to manage it. But it didn't take long for Zuck to screw Saverin: He founded another LLC in Delaware that bought the first LLC, then distributed shares in the new company, effectively diluting Saverin's shares to below 10%—a "dirty trick" he learned from Facebook's new partner/investor Peter Thiel, cofounder of PayPal, mega-donor to Ted Cruz and one of Donald Trump's biggest supporters, who argues that Social Security, Medicare and granting women the right to vote in 1920 were all blows to democracy! More proof that Silicon Valley tech wizardry and asshole DNA go hand in hand.

Zuckerberg's politics are murky, but it appears that Thiel has rubbed off on him. In 2013 he hosted a fundraiser for Chris Christie and launched the lobbying group FWD.us, which funded ads promoting both the notorious Keystone pipeline and oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. But it's really Zuckerberg's role as chief mogul of the world's most influential online medium that has come under scrutiny. For determining how millions of people around the world get their news, form their beliefs and opinions and engage with society, he is currently one of the most powerful men on the planet.

Facebook boasts over two billion active users worldwide, who have obsessively uploaded every detail about their private lives for public consumption. India leads the pack, with the U.S., Brazil and Indonesia next, in that order. Zuckerberg has promised to protect their privacy with every new media acquisition or Facebook feature, then reneged on those vows in order to monetize the traffic. In 2009, without any warning, he began making public users' Friends lists, which were originally set to private. He promised that private data would not be shared with advertisers or third-party apps and then did exactly that. If pissed-off users deactivated or deleted their accounts, they were told their photos and videos would be inaccessible—another bald-faced lie. In 2007 he allowed the new social advertising program Beacon to publish people's recent purchases and games played on their News Feed, until a storm of protests forced him to backtrack. Then in 2016 WhatsApp, a messenger app owned by Facebook, announced it would begin sharing names and phone numbers with its parent company. This prompted a lawsuit from a German consumer watchdog and a federal complaint claiming Facebook violated an agreement with the FTC in 2012 to stop these blatant deceptions. All of this is consistent with the crapfest of cons he perpetrated in founding the company.

The FTC may need a special division to keep up with Zuckerberg's chronic violations. It's clear by now that the man is a serial liar who has zero respect for all the "dumb fucks" he continues to lure onto his site. Still, he maintains that Facebook is a great boon to humanity. A growing body of evidence suggests otherwise.

A 2015 study by the Journal of Social and Clinical Psychology found that obsessive Facebook users suffer from more depressive symptoms, fueling social discord. Then there are all the stupid criminals and psychopaths who have live-streamed their heinous acts on Facebook, including burglary, rape, torture and child abuse. Some of these idiots were actually shocked when the police showed up at their door—they just couldn't resist the temptation of instant fame on the King Kong of social networks.

Facebook was instrumental in helping activists organize the Arab Spring protests, which seemed like a good thing—until the oppressive authorities used those same accounts to crack down on dissidents. For monitoring citizens' beliefs, whereabouts, activities and social connections, the old East German Stasi and Soviet KGB could never have dreamed up a more thorough tool for surveillance. Recently Facebook has been used to organize deadly attacks by Palestinian radicals on Israeli citizens, ethnic cleansing in Myanmar, and violent mobs in India reacting to a fake news message on WhatsApp. Facebook's "filter bubbles" feed users more of the news articles, fake or true, that Facebook determines they're interested in, whether it's anti-Semitic rants, fucked-up conspiracy theories or other crazy batshit.

But perhaps Zuckerberg's worst crime of all was his allowance of 80,000 "fake news" Facebook posts by Russian actors during the 2016 election campaign, all designed to throw the election to Trump. Considering that an astounding 45% of Americans get most or all of their news via Facebook, there's no way in hell this influence was a "crazy idea," as Zuckerberg claimed. He knew it was happening, but claimed no responsibility whatsoever, stating that Facebook was merely a platform, until it was much too late and Generalissimo Trump was installed in the White House.

Stoking political polarization, violence, paranoia and criminal acts has become Facebook's forte—all of little consequence to Zuckerberg as long as his massive fortune continues to bloat. For all of this, he ranks as one of the biggest Assholes on planet Earth. Our suggestion to Facebook addicts: Stop enabling him and withdraw now! Your health and the health of society will be so much better for it. H

BABY-BIRDING

Redditor iPiPrince first suspected something was amiss when he tried the scrambled eggs. They looked okay, but for some reason tasted too… mushy. And then there was the smell—it seemed off. His girlfriend attributed it to fancy cheese, but the truth would prove far more disturbing.

Turns out our unwitting boyfriend was totally unaware that he was participating in a fetish known as "baby-birding," wherein a person chews up food before feeding it to their partner. "She's starting to chew her food and feed it to me," he wrote online in a desperate plea for help. "Chicken, salad, eggs, etc. It's so disgusting."

The internet's response was mixed. Some advised him to get out of there pronto; others suggested starting a dialogue in the hopes of establishing boundaries. But baby-birding is actually quite tame. Nothing puts things into perspective quite like situational context. For example, what if she was sexually attracted to statues (agalmatophilia), or got aroused seeing you freeze your ass off (psychrophilia)? Maybe she enjoys the sensation of live insects against her bare skin (formicophilia) or "accidentally" falling down stairs (climacophilia)?

So really, where's the harm in a little saliva? After all, couples swap spit every day. And who wouldn't leap at the opportunity to do away with a tedious chore like chewing one's own food? Counterarguments notwithstanding, iPiPrince plans on reaching out to her exes for advice—unless, of course, that's who he's been eating the whole time (vorarephilia).

"One cannot think well, love well, sleep well, if one has not dined well." —VIRGINIA WOOLF, AUTHOR

SURVEY SAYS…

As controversial and annoying as Pornhub can be (read anti-ad-blocking bullshit and unapologetic piracy), when it comes to analytics, the site's data is both comprehensive and revelatory. By looking at their figures on male and female search trends in 2017, we can learn a lot about what the sexes have in common as well as how they diverge.

A snapshot: Ladies love lesbian porn. Girl-on-girl action is the most searched porn among women, who represent over 25% of Pornhub users. Speaking to Vice, Montreal-based sex therapist Dr. Laurie Betito chalks this up to a safe exploration of one's sexuality. It should also be noted that scissoring is a major female fan favorite.

Men and women are both really into Hentai. Huh? Really? Apparently anime porn knows no gender boundaries, because Hentai is the fourth-most-searched term for guys and gals alike.

Mommy issues, anyone? MILFs, moms, stepmoms—the top results for men are deeply Oedipal, but who's judging? Porn is fantasy, and if that fantasy is fucking your dad's hot new wife, then more power to you. Just remember to scrub your browser history when the 'rents are in town.

Guess who likes to watch rough sex? Again, porn can be an amazing way to safely explore your sexual desires. After lesbian porn, rough sex is one of the most highly searched terms among women surveyed, followed closely by gangbang and big black dick. By comparison, men are all about massage videos and stepsister scenarios.

What does it all mean? One takeaway is that men and women could benefit a lot from being more aware and in tune with what turns the other gender on. And maybe—just maybe—porn would be a less solitary pursuit if the sexes celebrated common ground, even if that common ground happens to be sex ninjas and Japanese schoolgirl sex cults.

THE REAL FAKE NEWS: ZUCKERBERG FACES FACTS

PALO ALTO, CA—Amid a chorus of growing concern surrounding the spread of fake news stories on Facebook during the 2016 Presidential election, and the potential for similar abuses in the coming 2018 midterms, Facebook cofounder and CEO Mark Zuckerberg has announced plans to fight misinformation on the site.

"We've formulated a three-prong approach to tackle this serious issue," says Zuckerberg. "One: I will personally ignore critics by putting my fingers in my ears and repeatedly shouting, 'Facebook is not a publishing company! Facebook is not a publishing company!' Two: I will issue several vague edicts regarding the problem. And three: Wearing nothing but my birthday suit, I will roll around on an enormous pile of cash while chortling like a walrus in heat." Zuckerberg then, for no apparent reason, recited a long list of his favorite prime numbers.

"It's good to see Facebook finally utilize its vast resources to counter fake news," says media analyst Jan Miller with the Alternative Internet Institute (AII). "Some people are worried that Zuck could get paper cuts, thus slowing the effort, but money is actually made from a blend of cotton and linen. Cool, huh?"

While many see this as a positive development, others don't share their support for the move. "Is bad," says totally real Facebook user Johnny America Smith. "Is censorship. Next is gulag. While here, check out big news link FW: RE: FW: FW: FW: FW: FW: 'CLINTON DRINK JEW BLOOD TO DESTROY USA WITH ZIONIST VOODOO!!!1!'"

POT PARTIES

The tectonic shift toward legal marijuana is bringing people together, with some dispensaries offering more than choice bud to their less inhibited customers. Let's put it this way: Weed makes everything better—food, music, sex...especially sex.

So it is at the Speakeasy Vape Lounge and Cannabis Club in Colorado Springs, where owner Jaymen Johnson recently hosted a sex party for members. He says it's completely legal, as his business is considered a private club, and likens it more to a swingers' soiree than the masked ball scene in Eyes Wide Shut.

Oh, to be a fly on the wall…a wall adorned in psilocybin art and extraterrestrial iconography, bathed in the violet glow of black light and steeped in the pungent twin aromas of patchouli and sage. Stoner tropes aside, sex-pot parties are definitely a thing. According to Bustle, L.A.-based Green Soldiers Healers (GSH) promote "Pot and Passion" events that celebrate the sexual potency and aphrodisiac properties of sweet sticky icky.

During Pot and Passion parties, guests are educated by "experts" about what strains and dosages are ideal for sex. Cannabis products are a given, while vibrators and other toys are made available to help maximize pleasure while exploring the positive impacts of weed on one's sex life. "It's like Mary Kay—but for pleasure," says GSH founder Denise.

Not in L.A.? Try these five fab strains for a heightened sexual experience (courtesy of the heads over at leafly.com): For "sexy solo time," try Girl Scout Cookies; if slow, passionate lovemaking is your jam, get some Bubblegum Kush; Sour Diesel is the stuff for intense, no-holds-barred fucking; Harlequin is a perfect match for wake 'n' bake sex; and creative kinksters need that sweet Jillybean. Viagra, you just got served.

WOMEN ON THE MARCH

There's no denying the momentum of change as women worldwide marched again this January. As much a collective "Fuck you!" to Trump's blithe misogyny as a declaration of war against the status quo, this collective show of strength and solidarity proved inspiring and hopeful.

Any lingering concerns over maintaining last year's momentum proved unfounded. According to Vox, Women's Marches over the third weekend in January "involved between 1.6 million and 2.5 million people in events across the U.S., with an average of 6,700 to 10,400 per march."

Globally, women marched in solidarity in more than 500 events across six continents, from Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, to Quito, Ecuador, and everywhere in between. Organizers in Berlin staged a large demonstration near the U.S. embassy, combining it with a drive to register American expats to vote.

Celebrities were out in full force, and just like last year, the protest signs were totally on point. "Super callous fascist racist extra braggadocious" was just one of many not-so-subtle digs at America's preeminent pussy-grabber. See you at the polls, fuckface!

Time's Up

I would like to address the rash of sexual harassment allegations leveled against men in entertainment, the media and government. To all males living in this country, I issue a collective statement: Enough already!

Perhaps I had the advantage of growing up with four sisters in my family, a situation that some say predisposes males to be kinder to females throughout all stages of their life. Frankly I remember times when I was embarrassed by making incidental contact with a female, followed by an immediate and sincere apology.

Ladies of America, please be assured that the actions of a few do not represent the feelings and beliefs of most men. You are our mothers, sisters, daughters, cousins, etc., and comprise one half of the species we call the human race. For that matter, do not despair because the true, honest gentlemen of this country know better than to act inappropriately.

We will always cherish your beauty, charm and, most importantly, your intelligence. Now help us to drive out this dreadful scourge—sexual harassment and abuse—once and for all. It is up to all of us. Let us begin.

Keep on Fighting

I want to thank the good people at HUSTLER who have worked tirelessly to produce high-quality adult entertainment. Today it is more important than ever before that Larry Flynt and his dedicated staff keep on fighting for freedom of expression and battling censorship.

Mr. Flynt has been a hero of mine ever since I first discovered his publications, and I am honored to be a contributor to the magazine's humor page. Thank you all for continuing the good fight. —J. Fleming

Suggestion Box

I'm 71 and have been with HUSTLER for 30 years. I would like to see a new section: what-they-look-like-now photos of models who appeared in HUSTLER before 2000. The December '91 pictorial Briannon: Acid Gash Back, which I found in the back of the May '17 issue, was fantastic. Photographer Suze Randall does women justice. Briannon's tiny boppers are nice, but us old-timers like naturally voluptuous boobs. —Dale Abdo

Proud Reader

Right now I'm drinking a bottle of wine and admiring Larry Flynt. I was just flipping through an old HUSTLER, August '13, when he said the Tea Party thing was gaining momentum and probably going to steamroll into something bigger—not his words, mine. Man, was Larry right!

The mainstream media had no idea, while he knew it all along. I'm writing so I can say that Larry Flynt is a genius. I've always thought that his editorials were the real deal, and damn, they are the real deal. Larry is a living legend, and I'm proud to say I read his incredible magazine.

March Greatness

Howdy, HUSTLER. After the bullshit I've had to deal with recently, I decided to read Larry Flynt's autobiography, An Unseemly Man, in order to get some ideas on resilience. Larry clearly stated, "When you love someone, and are loved in return, even the worst times and circumstances cannot destroy you." Well, hell yes to that!

It makes me feel a bit better seeing that HUSTLER is still as good as ever. The March '18 issue was really great. Three of my current favorite porn stars were in layouts: Anya Olsen, Lana Rhoades and Adria Rae. There was a nice article on Stoya, very good pictures of Izabella, Abigail Mac and Zoey Monroe, and Hardcore Showcase included images from The Gangbang of Riley Reid. Plus Anastasia Rose was in Beaver Hunt.

Bravo, Beavers

I am a 28-year-old who loves girls and pussy. I am a huge HUSTLER fan and hoping that you will print my letter before I die. I have stage 4 pancreatic cancer, and I've been told by doctors that my days are numbered. That's why I want to make each one worthwhile.

Anyways, I just received my February '18 issue, and I really thought Nikki in Beaver Hunt was so fucking hot! My pussy got wet looking at her. I'd love to eat out Nikki's pussy for hours and have her eat mine. Tiara Tae was also hot; her pussy is gorgeous too.

I do have one request. Can you please show more of Demonica, a Beaver in the October '17 issue? I want to see her fully nude again, and I want her to know that she can punish me whenever she wants. I would like to see Demonica one more time.

—Roxxxy

Demonica and dozens of other fine amateur models will be showcased in Best of Beaver Hunt, which goes on sale in early April.

Male and female readers alike adored February '18 Beaver Hunt newcomer Nikki.

NATASHA LEGGERO

DELIGHTFULLY DIRTY

NATASHA LEGGERO DRESSES LIKE A QUEEN AND CURSES LIKE A SAILOR. KNOWN FOR A STAND-UP ROUTINE THAT IS BOTH DEBONAIR AND DIRTY, LEGGERO STARTED HER ACTING CAREER WITH ROLES ON MANY OF TV'S MODERN COMEDY CLASSICS, INCLUDING IT'S ALWAYS SUNNY IN PHILADELPHIA (CREDITED AS "STRIPPER #1"), KEY & PEELE ("WHITE WOMAN #2"), AND RENO 911! (BOTH "PREGNANT GIRLFRIEND" AND "PANTSLESS HOOKER). SHE'S PROVEN TO BE A WORTHY ADVERSARY TO ANDREW DICE CLAY AS HIS GIRLFRIEND ON SHOWTIME'S DICE, AND NOW PLAYS LILLIAN BELLACOURT ON ANOTHER PERIOD, THE COMEDY CENTRAL RAUNCHFEST LEGGERO COCREATED. THE VERY PREGNANT, VERY COMELY COMIC RECENTLY TOOK THE TIME TO TALK TO HUSTLER ABOUT THE DELIGHTFULLY VULGAR LILLIAN, THE GILDED AGE OF INCESTUOUS BILLIONAIRES AND HOW SHE WAS DUPED INTO WATCHING JAMES TOBACK FUCK A TREE.

INTERVIEW BY T.S. FARLEY
PHOTOGRAPHY BY VICTOR LIGHTWORSHIP

HUSTLER: Most stand-up comics look like schlubs, but you take the stage in high heels, cocktail dresses, opera gloves, the occasional fur coat. How did you decide to take on that persona?
NATASHA LEGGERO: I don't know. I've always dressed up my whole life. Then, going onstage, I remember I read a quote where someone said, "If you dress like the audience, you become one of them." I didn't want that. The thing is, you're putting on a show. So it's just kind of an old-fashioned thing that I do. Also, I found that when I started really dressing up onstage, I could get away with a little more, because people were like, "Oh, okay, it's a character…"

Speaking of getting away with things, I saw you ask a woman in the audience why she didn't have kids. "What? You don't want to turn your pussy into Mount St. Helens?"
[Laughs.] It's a character!

A wonderfully dirty character.
I wouldn't call myself dirty, but I certainly am not trying to, you know, be clean. Most comics will say what they're thinking, and people seem to appreciate it. People want to see comedians say stuff not normally said on TV, the stuff a lot of people are thinking but don't dare say.

Are there things you wouldn't talk about?
Let's see, I feel like I'm not that political. Well, actually, everyone's kind of political today in that we all hate Donald Trump. And I have a new thing about sexual harassment in a special coming out on Netflix. But I feel like anything happening in the world that's worth talking about is worth talking about onstage.

Has your frankness ever gotten you into trouble? I saw something online called your "New Year's Eve incident."
That was such a long time ago! I was on a national television show, I think with Carson Daly, and I just made some silly joke about veterans, but they got mad. They got very mad, and so many came forward—you know how men get on the internet—like "I'm gonna kill her" or "Fuck you, you stupid cunt." All these terrible things were being said by guys who had, like, kids in their profile pictures! I think as a comedian sometimes you're gonna say things that will offend people, and I will say, elderly vets are definitely easily offended. But now you're making me get into trouble again!

It's an interesting dichotomy though—you're a well-heeled woman, yet you say such shocking things. I mean, you start the Sarah Silverman episode of Tubbin' With Tash by saying, "I got so drunk last night, I couldn't tell if I had my period or I was shitting blood."
[Laughs.] The idea there is that I'm this kind of inappropriate talk show host, so that's a little out of context. [Laughs more.]

Okay, give us some context about Tubbin' With Tash.
That's an interview show I do in my hot tub, on my YouTube channel. I do the show with my spa boy, Pig Bottom, and we interview various guests. I had Sarah Silverman on there, and Chelsea Handler, Eric Andre, Jeffrey Ross.

I wanted to ask you about your spa boy, Pig Bottom, because that is one hairy man.
Pig Bottom was my boyfriend at the time, and now he's my husband, Moshe Kasher. Pig Bottom is basically into everything sexually; that's what Pig Bottom is all about. He's often trying to pick up guests.

It is an enjoyable show. I mean, Sarah Silverman in a bikini!
Well, that's why people seem to like the show, because they get to see all their favorite comedians, you know, half naked. Although Tig Notaro did wear a three-piece suit into the hot tub, and Chelsea Peretti wore four garbage bags duct-taped together.

I also enjoyed you recently as the girlfriend in Dice.
Talk about dirty!

You're hardly a wallflower on there. I remember his character telling you not to swear, and you said, "You can say cunt lips, but I can't say shit?"
Ha! I think I might've improvised that.

So were you a fan of Dice back in the day?
I feel like I didn't really know much about him because I was too young, or maybe I just wasn't into comedy in that way. But I was definitely aware of who he was as a comedian, and when I started comedy, he was someone I would go to watch. He would always make me laugh. Even when he didn't have a show and people weren't talking about him very much, I always thought he was really funny. And he really will say anything, which I appreciate. I love to watch that.

Which brings us to the fantastically filthy Another Period, whose third season premiered on Comedy Central in January. The show earned my seal of approval from the first episode, when the Bellacourt sisters hiked up their skirts to get their massive bushes perfumed by a servant.
Ha, you liked that? Thank you.

Give us the who, what, why of the show.
The show was created by me and Riki Lindhome. She's from a musical comedy group called Garfunkel and Oates, and we basically wanted to create a show that we both thought was funny and were really into. We came up with the idea after a trip to Newport, Rhode Island, which is a fascinating place. You can still go there and tour all these amazing museums. They're basically the houses where these rich people used to live during the Gilded Age, that time around 1900-1912, before they introduced income tax. These people were living like rappers. They were billionaires. A hundred years ago and they were like billionaires, diamonds on the ceilings and things. It was crazy, and those peoples' lives were so fascinating and eccentric, we kind of created the show based on that. At the time everyone was obsessed with Downton Abbey, but that's all in England, and the American version, to me, is much more interesting because we didn't come from long lines of dukes and duchesses and lords. For us it was just "our dad was a fur trapper" and all of a sudden people got rich and didn't know how to act with all that money. We thought that era was definitely ripe for comedy.

The family at the center of the show is the Bellacourts, who are always screaming at the servants and fucking their sisters and generally being all-around dicks. How do you think the Trump >> family would have fit in with that crowd?

CHEESE SNACKS

Unfortunately, I think they all would have been great friends.

You had some great guest stars on the first two seasons, like Jack Black and Ben Stiller. Tell us about Season 3.
We have Jemaine Clement, Patton Oswalt, Chelsea Peretti. It's hard to remember them all…

Meanwhile, you have an absolutely all-star cast of regulars.
We're so lucky! We have Michael Ian Black, David Koechner, Jason Ritter, Christina Hendricks, Brian Huskey, Paget Brewster, Armen Weitzman, Beth Dover, Brett Gelman, Tom Lennon, David Wain—so many great comedians.

And while the whole cast is a riot, Michael Ian Black as Mr. Peepers deserves extra kudos.
Michael Ian Black is so amazing. When we wrote the show, it helped to think about who could play this character, like who is your dream person? That helps the lines come to you. So we picked Michael Ian Black as our butler character, but we didn't think he'd do it. When he agreed, it was awesome!

So you write for Another Period as well?
It's definitely a group effort. It's basically Riki and I and Jeremy Konner, the director, who have kind of been at the helm. Moshe Kasher, my husband, is one of the main writers, and we've just been lucky to get really great comedy writers.

The show is a treasure trove of societal jokes. I mean, at one point your character Lillian says that at the time of her first marriage she was "11 years old, the height of a woman's sexual peak."
[Laughs.] Well, some of the jokes we make in that show are becoming more and more relevant. We have a character this season, he's a senator, and he's looking for a girl, but he doesn't want her born before 1899. Basically that would make her under 16. And that totally related to the Roy Moore situation, so we just kind of get lucky with some stuff.

How about the scene where Hamish is in jail and he asks his African-American cellmate what he's in for, and the black guy says "staring"?
Well, yes, we do try to make some parallels, and unfortunately it's easier than ever to make parallels between now and a hundred years ago because we still have a lot of the same problems.

At the end of Season 2, you guys really tear into religion. Was that a conscious choice?
Oh, yes, always. Like, Beatrice is in love with her brother, Frederick, but they realize, through a musical number, that they'll only be able to "fuck in heaven," because they're just not allowed to be together on earth. It's always silly, but yes, there's an underlying satire for sure.

Given the world we live in today, I have to ask you about the Time's Up/Me Too movements. Is it true you were the 390th victim of sexual harassment at the hands of James Toback?
I believe I was the 396th.

To summarize for our readers, when you were first starting out in New York City 20 years ago, he basically dangled a job in front of you if you promised to grow your armpit hair long?
Basically, yes. I mean, we're all pretty stupid at 20 years old, or I was, and I was living in New York, and he told me I was gonna be a huge star. He approached me with all of these magazines he'd been in, because there wasn't the internet then, so it was like he was bringing the internet to me. He laid all these magazines out to prove that he was a director and said he wanted to meet. He told me that he was gonna give me a part in this movie Two Girls and a Guy, but the caveat was that I had to grow out my armpit hair. So I spent all summer growing it out, and then finally it was like four inches long, and he decided that was long enough to meet. He met me in Central Park, and right away he wanted to see it. Then we went to the Ramble, which was like a gay cruising spot before Giuliani cleaned up New York, and he just started humping a tree and having an orgasm. And I don't know if you've ever seen the movie Two Girls and a Guy, but I'm not in it.

So you're saying his wasn't the best seduction technique?
[Laughs.] Absolutely not! I thought he was going to audition me or cast me in this movie. And that's the problem too—when you're young, you have such a big head, or at least I did. I was like, Of course someone wants to put me in a movie without even seeing me act! They can just sense how talented I am. You just assume people are legit until stuff like that happens, but that's why I think it's important for anyone to tell any story. It's all part of it. I mean mine's obviously silly, and it happened 20 years ago, but still it was inappropriate, and it certainly fashioned how I think about things. It's great that women are finally getting the chance to speak up. Everyone was coming forward, saying Toback's name on Twitter, and I thought, That guy did that to me too!

Finally, let's address the elephant in the room: your belly. Are you enjoying being pregnant?
No, I think people who love being pregnant are psycho.

When my wife was pregnant, she became superhorny and a bitch.
I'm definitely the latter. It's just really hard because I'm very uncomfortable, and it's getting worse and worse by the day.

But it seems kind of funny that you're pregnant, because in a bunch of your shows you implied you never would be. In one you made the abortion joke, "I'll never be pregnant…for long."
I know, and I changed my mind!

In another you said "I ain't having babies. I have a career."
That's in a rap. I don't usually use the word ain't in conversation. I said, "I have a career, I ain't having babies, the price of two babies equals four Mercedes," or something [laughs]. I was just doing a hip-hop thing.

Last question. In one of your stand-ups you talk about taunting your friends who had kids by chanting, "My pussy's still tight, my pussy's still tight…." Care to comment?
I mean, talk to me in a couple months. I'll give you an update. H

When I'm not making porn, I'm smoking blunts, eating munchies and watching Rick and Morty on repeat. I love that fucking show.

I'm half Native American, and when I was a kid, my family chose a baby deer to be my spirit animal. I think their choice makes a lot of sense, because I'm sweet, doe-eyed and curious about life. But I'm also rebellious. That's why my role model is Marilyn Monroe. She was smart and beautiful. In ten years I don't know what I'll be doing, but I'm open to where life takes me. I could still be doing porn, or maybe I'll have kids. We'll see!

I don't really count how many people I've had sex with, but I'm pretty sure it's over 100 by now. I mean, after all, I'm single. I'm just not into relationships. Never have been. But I absolutely love one-night stands."

A man came home from a long business trip and found his son riding a brand-new bicycle. "Who bought you that bike?" the father growled.

"I did," his son replied. "I bought it with the money I earned hiking."

"Hiking?!" the father bellowed. "Who pays anyone to go hiking?"

"The deliveryman," the boy explained. "Every time he brings a package for Mommy, he gives me $20 and tells me to take a hike."

Olav and Grete, Norwegian immigrants who'd been married for almost 30 years, were lying in bed one night. Grete leaned over and asked, "Olav, have you ever been unfaithful during all our years together?"

"Not even once!" Olav exclaimed. "But have you been unfaithful?"

"Well, er, yes," Grete stammered. "But only three times."

"Three times?" Olav sighed. "That's not very many. Do you remember them?"

"Yes, I do, dear," Grete replied. "Remember when we didn't have enough money to fix the furnace one winter? I blew the repairman in the basement."

"I guess that was okay," Olav allowed. "We sure didn't want to freeze to death. What about the second time?"

Grete responded, "Remember when you wanted to expand the store, and you had to get approval from the building inspector?"

"Yes, and a bigger store really paid off," Olav said. Then he asked, "When was the third time you were unfaithful?"

Smiling, Grete confessed, "Remember when you were running for president of the Sons of Norway and you needed 125 votes?"

Answer: You have to wait an hour for a three-minute ride.

Bill boarded a bus with both of his front trouser pockets full of golf balls and sat down next to a pretty blonde. As the bus rolled down the street, the girl kept staring at him and his bulging pockets. Finally Bill muttered, "It's golf balls."

The puzzled blonde continued to look at Bill, thinking deeply about what he'd said. Unable to contain her curiosity any longer, she asked, "Does it hurt as much as tennis elbow?"

Jennifer went into a pet store and spotted a parrot on sale for $25. "Why is this parrot so cheap?" she asked the shopkeeper.

"Look, lady," he said. "I'll level with you. This bird used to live in a whorehouse, and sometimes it says some pretty vulgar stuff."

Jennifer decided to buy it anyway. She took the parrot home and hung the birdcage in the living room. The bird looked around for a couple of minutes, then snapped, "New house, fucking new madam!" Jennifer was a bit shocked, but figured it wasn't so bad.

An hour later her teenage daughters returned from school. The parrot saw them and chirped, "New house, fucking new madam, fucking new girls." Jennifer explained the situation, and she and her daughters all had a good laugh.

When her husband came home from work, Jennifer excitedly ushered him into the living room. The parrot looked at him and cackled, "Oh, hi, Bob!"

DEATH OF THE INTERNET?

NET NEUTRALITY VS. CORPORATE GREED

Utter the words net neutrality, and you risk inducing a stupor equal to saying, "Let's talk particle physics!" A majority of Americans think net neutrality is a good thing. In fact, before it was rescinded in December, 83% of those polled were against the repeal, including three out of four Republicans. But many of us are kind of vague on the geeky details. Here's the essential thing to know: What the Bill of Rights was to the American Revolution, net neutrality is—or was—to the ongoing Digital Revolution. The freewheeling internet is nothing less than the evolving brain and nervous system of our new global civilization, increasingly connected by international cables, phone lines, satellites and wireless transmitters. Whether you call it the Information Age or the Digital Age, it's every bit as revolutionary as the Industrial Age.

We are still in the early stages of this revolution, and Donald Trump has just tossed a bucket of wrenches into the works. Repealing net neutrality may not be the most malicious or poisonous thing he's done, but it's easily the most ignorant and stupid, because not only does it roll back the extension of democracy and free speech that the internet has enabled, it will also cripple free enterprise—the one thing that Trump supposedly holds sacred. >>

All of the pioneering internet websites that we take for granted today—Google, Amazon, YouTube, Facebook, Twitter, Reddit, Craigslist, etc.—got off the ground precisely because access and traffic over the internet were open equally to all players, including start-ups operating out of a garage, without restriction. Nobody was blocked or "throttled" down if they offered a new search engine, blog, social medium or news service better than what was already out there. That's how a little start-up named Google eventually triumphed over Infoseek and some of the other big, dominant search engines of the time. And why nobody uses Grolier's online encyclopedia anymore—Wikipedia could load results as fast as Grolier's or the old Encyclopedia Britannica online, and it proved to be more authoritative and thorough, with editing open to the public.

Beyond enabling innovation in all fields of communication, science, medicine and commerce, the open internet has revolutionized information sharing, opening the door to citizen journalists and activists of all persuasions. Anybody with a blog or Twitter account can publicize events and opinions overlooked or suppressed by a mainstream media increasingly concentrated and compromised. Uploaded citizen videos of police brutality, hacked emails and viral media campaigns have given powerful new voices to marginalized communities, exposed hidden corruption and spurred long overdue political change. Now this radical extension of democracy, free speech and free enterprise is threatened by the usual suspects: greedy corporations merging into monopolistic monsters, abetted by their colluding, lobby-owned agents in government.

The net neutrality rules enacted by Obama's Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in 2015 did nothing more than codify the way the internet has actually operated since its birth in the 1990s. The controversy revolves around the definition of internet service providers (ISPs) according to the Telecommunications Act of 1996, which established two separate categories: Title I for telecommunications, or "enhanced services," and Title II for "common carriers," which are regulated more strictly. The concept of common carriers means that if your business transports goods or services for other businesses or individuals, certain legal obligations apply: 1) you have to serve anyone or any business that wants to use your service; 2) you have to charge everyone and every business the same basic price for the same service. Postal carriers and taxicabs are examples of common carriers; the post office can't charge rich people more than poor people to mail the same letter or box, and taxicabs can't charge Afro-Americans or Muslims more for taking the same ride.

Common carrier status was codified in a federal statute in 1887 to regulate the railroads and updated in 1910 to include telephone and telegraph companies. The FCC was established in 1934 to enforce common carrier laws. In 2002 there was a new player on the block: cable television companies providing internet access. At that time the federal government was in Republican hands, and FCC chairman Michael Powell decided not to define the new providers as common carriers, because those early ISPs (like AOL) often provided content, with their home page portals, domain registration and email services. So they were arguably more than just common carriers of other companies' content, hence eligible for the less restrictive Title I classification.

But the landscape has changed drastically since those primitive days. Now the vast majority of content on the internet is not offered by ISPs, but by "edge" providers, from YouTube and Twitter to Netflix and Amazon, all competing on a level playing field. And the big broadband providers—Comcast, Charter, Verizon, AT&T, etc.—are really just common carriers nowadays. But Ajit Pai disingenuously argues that they are still actually content providers, simply because they enable access to it. This is like defining a highway as a "food and entertainment provider" because you can drive to a restaurant and movie theater on it! Pai also argues that net neutrality is somehow stifling innovation, when the entire history of the internet proves otherwise.

Pai has proven himself to be a slimy corporate stooge, but Trump and some of the other right-wing blowhards opposed to net neutrality are really more ignorant than venal. In their knee-jerk frenzy against any and all government regulation, they have absolutely no clue. In

KEEP THE WEB A FREE & GLOBAL PUBLIC SPACE!

2014 Trump actually tweeted this absurdity: "Obama's attack on the internet is another top down power grab. Net neutrality is the Fairness Doctrine. Will target conservative media." No, birdbrain, it's the exact opposite—with net neutrality rules, conservative media and all media are guaranteed equal treatment. That's the point! Ted Cruz cried out, "Washington wants power over the internet. The people want freedom online." Wrong again, dumbass—net neutrality is the very bedrock of internet freedom!

They might as well argue that professional football is under the tyrannical control of the NFL and all those oppressive referees throwing flags and enforcing rules. So what Trump and his cronies have done is the equivalent of building new football stadiums with the playing fields tilted 10 degrees. Teams bidding the highest money always play with their own end zones on the upper slope, and they're always running downhill to score. Teams losing the bidding war have their end zones on the lower slope, always running uphill to score. And the richest teams are free to bribe or lobby the referees to overturn penalty flags. With these slanted rules, the NFL would soon be known as the National Fraud League, with a few deep-pocket teams always winning and the less well-heeled teams always losing. That's the country Republicans and a few corporate Democrats have been building for the last few decades, and the overturn of net neutrality is yet another plank in the corporate domination of democracy.

Most Americans are coming to realize this truth: If a sector of the economy is not regulated by government, it's going to be "regulated" by giant corporations doing everything possible to stifle competition, because monopolies or duopolies are always more profitable. You either gobble up the competition in a merger or regulate the little fish out of business, then lobby for repeal of regulation once you're the only pirate sailing.

Trump's counterrevolution comes after 2017, a banner year for corporate mergers. According to a study by the nonprofit Institute for Local Self-Reliance, 129 million Americans, amounting to 40% of the population, only have one ISP in their area. And 146 million Americans have only two choices. The trend of greater concentration is likely to continue, meaning that soon most Americans will live as hostages to either a monopoly or duopoly of internet service providers. This is the main reason that Americans are getting plundered financially for service. Even though the internet was invented in the U.S., we pay higher prices for slower download speeds than a host of other nations, behind even Lithuania and Latvia (a parallel to our outrageous healthcare system). According to the Speedtest Global Index, the U.S. ranks 12th in wired internet speeds and 45th in mobile speeds, while being the 9th most expensive in the world! In 2002 we were promised by the FCC that regulating broadband providers under less restrictive Title I status would result in a competitive utopia, improving service and lowering prices for consumers. The exact opposite has happened!

The broadband lobby's mouthpiece, Ajit Pai, now tells us that we can trust ISPs to regulate themselves and not block/throttle content, or engage in anticompetitive paid prioritization (fast lanes for big spenders). If you believe that, please contact my Nigerian friend who just inherited a fortune and desperately needs to deposit funds in your bank account. >>

Here's why we can't trust the bastards: In 2005 Comcast was caught secretly blocking or slowing file-sharing technologies like BitTorrent and Gnutella over its networks. From 2007 to 2009, AT&T forced Apple to block Skype and other voice over internet protocol (VoIP) services on iPhones, then in 2012 disabled Apple's FaceTime on iPhones unless customers purchased a more expensive text-and-data plan. In 2011 MetroPCS started to block streaming video from all sources except YouTube. From 2011 to 2013 AT&T, Verizon and Sprint all teamed up to block Google Wallet, a mobile payment system competing with their own collaborative program named—believe it or not—Isis. And the list goes on.

Imagine this possibility: Comcast swallows Yahoo! (currently the seventh most popular U.S. site) in a multibillion dollar merger and then blocks or throttles down Google in order to force customers to use the inferior Yahoo! search engine. Or Verizon could buy Myspace and block or throttle Facebook. With merger mania running amok and a clear history of discriminatory behavior, these scenarios are not paranoid. And if Comcast or Verizon are the only providers in your area, what recourse do you have? Zilch from the supposedly "free market" and zilch from government if the FCC continues to be hobbled from doing its job.

Reclassifying broadband providers under Title I of the Telecommunications Act transfers them from the FCC to the Federal Trade Commission's jurisdiction. According to Tom Wheeler, the former FCC chairman under Obama, "It's a fraud. The FTC doesn't have rule-making authority. They've got enforcement authority, and their enforcement authority is whether or not something is unfair or deceptive. And the FTC has to worry about everything from computer chips to bleach labeling. Of course, carriers want [telecom issues] to get lost in that morass. This was the strategy all along." We might as well transfer meat inspection from the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) to the Internal Revenue Service—what the hell do they know about E. coli contamination?

Before the coup, a group of over 200 leading internet pioneers and engineers submitted a 43-page document to the FCC outlining how Pai's new rules were based on a flawed understanding of the internet's core principles: 1) the "network stack," composed of the physical layer, network layer, and the transport layer, where the TCP (Transmission Control Protocol) resides. This open structure guarantees that a new application or technology, such as real-time video conferencing, can operate on the appropriate layer without worrying about the technical details in the layers below; 2) the "end-to-end" principle, meaning that the guts of some new technology or application reside on "the edge" of the system—either on the server side (like YouTube's servers) or client side (your personal computer), not Comcast's mediating lines. Serious techies can read the whole 43-page document here: https://tinyurl.com/y7c92plr.

These two principles ensure that new developers don't have to worry about the decentralized structure of the internet—anything they invent can be deployed with relative ease. The internet is still rapidly expanding, connecting home appliances, wearable fitness and health tracking devices and even cars. And just as the internet and digital technology empowered small-scale entrepreneurs, artists and journalists, it is now revolutionizing engineering and industrial production, with ultra-sophisticated computer-aided design (CAD) programs and 3D printers producing objects made of glass, steel, titanium, cake frosting and even living cells. This enables any inventor without a lot of start-up capital to collaborate with global resources, manufacture revolutionary new products and distribute them worldwide. For all this potential innovation, the democratic, neutral status of the internet is absolutely essential.

Another revolutionary development is the proposed InterPlanetary File System (IPFS): a peer-to-peer distributed file system that would create a permanent record of all files ever posted to the internet and make censorship of any website virtually impossible. This system would use transmission protocols completely different from those used to send web pages, emails and streaming videos. Again, it could only flourish in a global network not hamstrung by interfering broadband providers. Such a system, of course, would send shivers down the spines of the world's most oppressive regimes. China's "Great Firewall" that blocks websites, web pages, search queries and instant messages could start springing serious leaks.

And let's not kid ourselves about our own country: The American mainstream media has been guilty of atrocious crimes of commission and omission, including the hyped lies about Saddam's WMDs that have mired us in over 15 years of futile, bankrupting warfare. The big media boys—The New York Times, Washington Post and major news networks—have always carried water for our imperial foreign-policy establishment, shielding the public from the crimes that our ruthless CIA and military have committed around the world. But that monopoly has been severely eroded by the democratic prowess of the internet.

The seminal case was journalist Gary Webb's "Dark Alliance" series, published by the San Jose Mercury News in 1996. Webb found evidence that the Nicaraguan Contra rebels had funded their brutal war by shipping vast quantities of cocaine to Los Angeles with the full knowledge and complicity of the CIA (no real surprise, since the CIA has long been implicated in drug trafficking to fund covert operations not funded or authorized by Congress, beginning with the Golden Triangle opium trade in Southeast Asia). Webb's article was completely ignored by the big boys, until it was published on the Mercury News' website, suddenly breaking through the media blockade and gaining a worldwide audience. The New York Times and Washington Post didn't follow up on his investigation—they simply ridiculed Webb, focusing on a few minor errors. Webb retired and eventually committed suicide. Even after the main points of his investigation were substantiated by other independent journalists, the Times and Post never apologized for their hatchet attack on this good man (his tragic story is told in the film Kill the Messenger). But the suppressed truth was forever out of the cage, thanks only to the free and open internet.

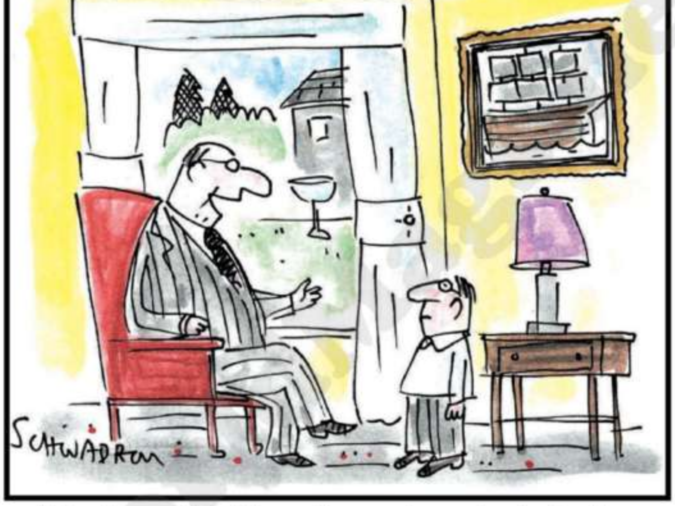
To their credit, the new media platform titans—Google, Facebook, Netflix, etc.—are vigorously opposing the abolition of net neutrality. But their white hats are soiled with some disturbing stains. After the "fake news" hysteria ensuing from Donald Trump's election, Google and Facebook instituted new protocols and algorithms to suppress alleged "fake news" websites, thus privileging the old mainstream media sources. In effect, this was another form of blocking and throttling, exactly what they have criticized ISPs for doing in the absence of net neutrality rules. After these new algorithms took effect last summer, 13 progressive websites saw their traffic plunge off a cliff, including alternet.org, -63%; truth-out.org, -25%; consortiumnews.com, -47%; commondreams.org, -37%; democracynow.org, -36%; and mediamatters.org, -42%.

That's one helluva lot of collateral damage. None of these sites are "fake news," but rather noncorporate news. This is truly catastrophic. Our plutocratic, warmongering nation desperately needs more uncompromised, noncorporate truth telling, not less. Consider that Google has collaborated with both the NSA and CIA to produce software, and that Jeff Bezos, CEO of the colossus Amazon, has developed information services for the CIA while also owning the Washington Post! If this is not a prescription for a Big Brother surveillance state, what is?

As Amazon continues to gobble up most of the nation's consumer business, while devastating Main Streets everywhere, and Google determines what we see or don't see on the worldwide web, there is talk that it might be time to start regulating these giants like public utilities—as common carriers of commerce and information, with a level playing field guaranteed for all. Both are quickly evolving into all-powerful monopolies with no valid competition, a situation that inevitably leads to abuse and distortion of the free market and free speech. Very soon we may need to extend the principle of net neutrality to the "edge providers," as well as the broadband mediators, and follow the EU's lead in fining Google a record $2.7 billion for antitrust violations last year.

For now, Trump's coup is not engraved in stone: the Internet Association, a lobby group for Silicon Valley's biggest players, is arming up to challenge the FCC decision in court, while attorneys general from 21 states and the District of Columbia have launched lawsuits opposing the abolition of net neutrality. Meanwhile, several American cities have created their own municipal broadband service to compete with the large private companies. With 83% of Americans dead set against this corporate grab, net neutrality is sure to be a major issue in the upcoming midterm elections. Evan Greer, campaign director for the nonprofit public interest group Fight for the Future, sums it up well: "Are they [congressmen] going to ignore overwhelming public opinion during a tight election year and rubber stamp these 500+ pages of blatant, stinking corruption? Or will they listen to their constituents, small businesses, free speech advocates and tech experts and support a Congressional Review Act (CRA) vote to overturn the FCC's repeal?"

With undeterred outrage by the greater public—including you, dear reader—we're betting on the latter.



"Feelings of self-worth are important, Junior, but never confuse them with net worth."

DIRECTOR: ANTON SLAYER. STARRING: MAYA KENDRICK, AVI LOVE, CHLOE CHERRY, KAT MONROE, JUSTIN HUNT, BRAD KNIGHT, SETH GAMBLE & CONNOR KENNEDY.

There are certain experiences that a young woman blossoming into adulthood will remember for the rest of her life. Her first kiss. Her sweet 16 party. And the first time she opened her shitpit for the fervent pounding of a blood-swollen prick. Barely Legal #157: My First Anal captures the wide-eyed and gaped-bung wonder of fresh-faced cuties taking their maiden stroll down Butt-Fuck Boulevard. Redheaded rump virgin Maya Kendrick catches her Forrest Gump-ish boyfriend paddling his prong to anal porn. A philosophical discussion ensues on the give-and-take of relationships, and an accord is reached: He will give her a cornholing, and she will take it. Kendrick has modest chest bumps and skin so pale, it might blind some viewers. But the sight of her gripping her strawberry pube patch as her man thoroughly scours her colon is worth that risk. Tight-bodied brunette Avi Love endures a particularly rigorous scene. Her eyes actually turn a little bloodshot as she jackhammers her face on her boyfriend's prick, which he then uses like a battering ram on her colon. With her full eyebrows and come-drill-me look, scum-hungry Kat Monroe brings to mind a vintage Brooke Shields—and she's a toy chest full of delightfully dirty talk as her dung ditch is pummeled. Barely Legal #157: My First Anal delivers an ass-load of pleasure. What's an aging cock hound to do when she's at the crossroads of being last year's hot young thing and next year's Walmart greeter? If life hasn't ravaged her too much, she becomes a MILF star. Alexis Fawx, the first wilting lily of Axel Braun's MILF Fest 2, is well-maintained enough, but teeters on the edge of desirability—with her blond locks and equine features, she'll appeal to viewers who have always yearned for a Curb Your Enthusiasm episode where Cheryl Hines gets explicitly drilled while Larry David's wrinkly nut sac slaps her ass with every ambivalent thrust. Unfortunately, Fawx's tits do not live up to Cheryl's, as they hang awkwardly like sacks of cement that have been stapled to her chest. Stacked brunet bombshell Jasmine Jae suffers from a similar affliction; scars jut out from under her udders like twin grimaces as she's porked. Bespectacled blonde Sarah Vandella's scene is amusing, both intentionally and not. The corny dialogue and humorous music provide comic relief as she tutors a young jock in the art of fucking, and Vandella emits sounds like the engine of a 1930s roadster trying to start up as she gargles his balls. Funny? Sure. Erotic? That's your call. If cum-spackled crow's feet and plastic-surgery missteps are your thing, go ahead, unzip, and party like it's 1989. —P.D.R.

KAROL LILIEN

Founded in the year 1267, Rožnov pod Radhoštěm, Czech Republic, can claim a verdant landscape, mostly sunny weather, medieval castles and breathtaking denizen Karol Lilien. "Girls from my country are sexy, beautiful and skillful at all things," the 25-year-old café manager boasts. "That's why men around the world are so fond of us." As for Karol, she's fond of skiing, volleyball—being 5-foot-9 makes her a formidable spiker—hard rock, Moravian folk music and "wild sex at least once a day." The bi babe is a certified risk-taker. "I love to suck and fuck just about anywhere," she tells us. "Indoors and outdoors, kitchen and bathroom counters, boots [trunks] and backseats of cars, and dangerous and prohibited places like parks, railroad stations and trains." It's no surprise that Karol has a daring fantasy: "I want to make love while soaring above Rožnov in a hot-air balloon."—Photos by Omnia Productions

BERLIN

"I would be a nudist all the time if I could," admits Berlin, 19, a stable hand from Kapaa, Hawaii. "One of my favorite pastimes is dancing topless at beach drum circles." The 5-foot-0 single gal explains why she's joined the Beaver colony: "I'm an open-minded free spirit, and I like to show off my body. All the guys I talked to about this said, 'Go for it.' So I did!" Berlin maintains that she's "always looking for a good time"—with or without clothes on. "I'm into horseback riding, art, indie-alternative music, traveling, smoking pot and watching Rick and Morty and The Walking Dead, even though I think they kept on walking too many seasons," Berlin discloses. Livening things up, she talks about her sex life: "I'm a nymphomaniac. I love cock and coochie, and I've always been amazed that a vagina is shaped like a taco. I really enjoy getting eaten out. The action on my clit makes me come every time, but I like giving guys great head too." Berlin, a gymnast in her school days, adds, "I love being tied up and told what and how to do things in bed. I dig a dominant guy who can take charge of the situation."

"My fantasy is to travel to Italy and find a sugar daddy!"

“My most memorable sexual encounter was a threesome I had. Both guys were pleasing me—more tongues and hands in the right places at the right time than I was used to.”

BROOKLYN BEACH

Hailing from Lapel, Indiana, 25-year-old Brooklyn Beach is a small-town girl eager to introduce herself to our readers. "Based on what I've been told by friends and family," she says, "I'm outgoing, sociable, funny and genuine. I did door-to-door sales for six years, and after that I worked at an adult novelty store—you know, what most people call a sex shop. I used to look at some of the dirty magazines on display. I never thought I'd be in one." But when a photography buff recently told the 5-foot-4 cutie about Beaver Hunt, she decided to give it a shot. "I'm grateful that I can share my curvaceous figure with men who appreciate a model who isn't the typical Barbie Doll-type," Brooklyn declares. She isn't a typical bedmate either. "I'm bi and very adventurous," Brooklyn fesses up. "One of my favorite activities is being watched as I perform oral sex. I'm proud to say I can deep-throat a man and lick his balls at the same time."

—Photos by Friend

"I have lots of sexual fantasies. One is experiencing my very first double penetration with two well-hung gentlemen. I'd also love to stick ice cubes inside a girl's pussy and slurp the melted ice out of her."

ADESSA WINTERS

Adessa Winters, 22, dreamed of being an astronaut while growing up in Illinois. After graduating from high school, the 5-foot-3 hottie hightailed it to Miami, Florida. That's where her career aspiration became more down-to-earth, with an emphasis on nude and naughty. "I started out as a cocktail waitress at a popular strip bar," Adessa recalls. "A few weeks later, seeing what the dancers were making, I was onstage, and customers were throwing dollar bills at me—even 10s and 20s. I learned that big, natural boobs and a nice ass are guaranteed moneymakers! Then I did a few internet sex scenes. I was labeled an amateur, but I felt like a porn star. I love big dicks and hombres who can keep going until I say, 'No más! No más!' I've never met many guys like that in my real life." Sex and exotic dancing aren't Adessa's sole calorie burners. The Avenged Sevenfold diehard digs working out conventionally and amorously. "I love being fucked on an exercise ball!" she raves. —Photos by Omnia Productions

"My fantasy is fucking onstage at the Daytona Beach Bandshell in front of a packed house."

CANDICE

HUSTLER CLASSIC
PHOTOGRAPHY BY
MATTI KLATT

Check out what our scouts brought back from Canada: Candice, an awe-inspiring exotic dancer who's been burning up hoserland with her sensational curves and big brown jugs. Sure, her eyes and lips are mesmerizing, but our eyes can't help but zoom in on those gnawable nipples—big bite-size nubs that could poke holes through the thickest winter clothing. We brought Candice to sunnier climes to display her scintillating, slippery slit. Gorgeous, eh?

THE EROTIC REVIEW
WORLDS BEST REVIEW PLATFORM FOR ADULT ENTERTAINMENT
I laid her on her back and expressed strokes of oral fondness to her sweet shaven flower which she seemed to be enjoyably sensitive to. I softly licked and gently sucked the magic emanating from her smooth flowery pedals and applied both simultaneously to budding style until she wriggled away.

After sipping some champaign, she retreated to the bathroom to change into an exceptionally hot lingerie outfit. Holy mackerel, this young thing oozed sexuality.
